

THE 10-POINT COMPLIANCE CHECK

For Your AI-Built Therapy Website

AI tools make it fast and cheap to build a professional-looking practice website. But "looks professional" and "meets your board's rules" are not the same thing. Run every AI-generated page through this checklist before you publish.

☐ No client testimonials without checking your board's rules first

Many licensing boards restrict or flag client testimonials on professional websites. Confirm your state board's current position before an AI tool talks you into a "What clients say" section.

☐ No outcome guarantees or "cure" language

AI copywriting defaults to confident, results-oriented phrasing. Scrub anything implying guaranteed outcomes, symptom elimination, or comparative superiority to other providers.

☐ Credentials displayed accurately

License type, license number (if your state requires it), and supervised status (if applicable) should be correct and current — not a generic AI-generated bio.

☐ A visible crisis/emergency disclaimer

State clearly that the site and any contact form are not for emergencies, and include crisis line information (e.g., 988) and instructions to call 911 if applicable.

☐ A privacy policy that matches what you actually do

AI tools often generate boilerplate privacy policies. Make sure it reflects your real data handling — not generic e-commerce language pulled from a template.

☐ HIPAA-aware contact and intake forms

Avoid default AI-suggested form embeds or plugins that store submissions insecurely or route them through non-compliant third parties. If a form collects PHI, it needs a BAA-covered tool.

☐ No tracking pixels or ad analytics on pages with PHI

AI website builders often auto-add analytics or ad pixels. Audit and remove any tracking on intake, contact, or scheduling pages.

☐ Basic accessibility covered

Alt text on images, sufficient color contrast, and readable font sizes — AI-generated designs frequently skip these unless you ask explicitly.

☐ Informed consent / scope language matches your real services

If the AI-generated copy lists specialties or approaches you don't actually offer, correct it before publishing — this can create both clinical and advertising issues.

☐ A state-specific advertising rule check

Rules on claims, comparisons, and advertising language vary by state and by board. Before launch, check your specific board's advertising guidance — don't rely on general AI knowledge of "what's normal."

A note on this checklist

This is general guidance, not legal or clinical advice, and it is not a substitute for reviewing your own state board's current advertising, confidentiality, and telehealth rules. Requirements vary by state and change over time — when in doubt, check your board directly or consult an attorney.